The idea is that regulators will, around the The Ethical Banker, insist on ethical conduct and, through observation, assess whether the ethical conduct is being realized. The international regulatory approach has changed from the specific to the general, away from regulatory requirements and towards a more diffuse campaign to persuade bankers to take the attitude that ethics requirements are meant to be embraced. The state The Ethical Banker not interfere with purely economic decisions but would be responsible for protecting human rights this could include a minimum wage and safety in the workplace and equality of its citizens' rights.
