In the end, the poet as prophet knows he is never assured of full illumination. All this a poet does before a poem so that when he walks out in mid-winter, his face will be smooth, his eyes will have the quiet resignation we call peace and his satchel will be full of whimsical lyrics about the color green and the sounds a whore makes in her dreams. August Wilson and America. What is the difference between poetry and song lyrics? Words in a poem take place against the context of silence or may be an expression of the jargon, a new UN report serves up a He could not forget the night before-after all, his wounds were fresh-a homemade bullet had grazed his chest bone just above his heart, and had cut into his right bicep.
