Elias Eliopoulos, Paul Motta. Labour hire firm Agri Labour have been suspended. Since moving to Queensland from New Zealand two years ago he has lived with his aunt, unable to afford to move. And even at its strongest unionised sites, including a warehouse for a big food company in Melbourne's west, full-time work is an ideal, not universal.

I need to keep days free in case [the warehouse] calls," he says. But as the head of the NUW, attempting a revival of the historic union mission, he might be the most interesting union leader in Australia today.
