The king of this little nation is a fine, majestic-looking man, six feet high. Stopped at Jenkinson's, an intelligent, gentlemanly, hospitable man. Left Shellsburg at 6 o'clock. Steep hills, frightful precipices, little or no water, and even a scarcity of new whisky. It was to locate and take possession of this land that the long journey from Philadelphia to St. Saw his wife, a handsome, young dejected-looking woman, who appeared very poor and mountainous. However, her story ended with a detail of misfortunes.
