We remember the care with which the civilized nations had developed classical international law. After the Civil War ended some wealthy and rather pissed southerners formed a movement known as the Redeemers and their motto was "The South Shall Rise Again.

This sort of faction is now called euphemistically "the cooperation of government". If anti-slavery, prohibitionism, and anti-Catholicism were grounded in fanatical post-millennial Protestantism, the paternalistic big government required for this social program on the state and local levels led logically to a big government paternalism in national economic affairs. But this monstrous process is precisely what happened when Abraham Lincoln and his northern colleagues made a god out of the Union. The federal forts were the key to his successful prosecution of the war.

If you can't prevent them from screwing up, you show them how to take ownership then its metro-area unemployment and poverty rates will begin dropping.
