A grave concern in Riyadh and other GCC capitals is that Iran's reintegration within the global economy, as well as Tehran's improved relations with Italy and other Western states, is paving the way for more states of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization NATO to begin viewing Iran as a useful partner, if not a tacit ally, in the struggle against Sunni Islamist extremism and terrorism. They represent a significant upgrade in what were already important economic relations. Writing in Foreign Affairs William B. Cite this Email this Add to favourites Print this page. Political scientist Steve A. The models discussed are the rational-actor model, the cognitive model, the domestic-politics approach, the groupthink model, and the government-politics model. University of Akron, B. Since the signing of the nuclear agreement, Italy has been quick to arrange an exchange of high-level political visits with Tehran and to ink significant deals in sectors such as petrochemicals, heavy industry, infrastructure, finance and defense.
