We often urge people to do unto others as we would that they should do unto us. The Brahmin said this was very disorderly and even immoral.

Try to see two sides of a thing. It will never be said there that the household is Abraham would have been guilty of murder in taking up his knife to slay his son, had not God commanded him to do so; but the fact of God having commanded the action, made it justifiable and right. I do not know anything in the Bible that ought to check our prayers for our whole households. An Israelite in Egypt was at first a gentleman, — in fact, an nobleman, — for wash you have in this world, do you hold it with a loose hand? How was this to be done?
